Initial Value Forecast Skill Metrics applied to Climate Models

- Metrics for initial value forecast performance differ from those applied to climate models.

- Significant climate model improvements in recent years, but substantial biases remain and reliable parameterizations remain elusive.

- Initial value forecast performance and initial condition generation through DA are degraded in the presence of large model bias.

- Improving initialization for prediction across timescales will require considerable investment.